

DONOVAN IS OUT. PARADE OF OUR SCHOOLBOYS.

A New House Physician at Gouverneur Hospital To-Day.

The Accused Doctor Not Retained as a Hold-over.

Report of the Board of Examiners to the Commissioners' Hands.

Term of House Physician Donovan, of their Hospital, expired this morning, succeeded by Dr. Charles S. Williamson, who has been connected with the Gouverneur Hospital for the last twelve months.

Dr. Donovan, who had been charged by Senator and Joseph Friedman, of 57 Suffolk street, and Max Birman, of 102 Nassau street, with extorting money in connection with the suffering brought to Gouverneur Hospital Sept. 23 last from the panic in the spring, gave at 27 Lenox street, refused to be seen by an Evening World reporter this morning.

It will be remembered that an investigation of the charges against Donovan resulted last Monday in the exoneration of the doctor by the Medical Examining Board.

In their report to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, the Examining Board vindicated its action on the ground that Dr. Donovan claimed that the money given to him was given him by the Freedmans as an unsolicited gift.

None of the accusers however, have been permitted to testify at that hearing and accordingly President Porter of the Board of Charities ordered the Examining Board to re-investigate the charges and to take the testimony of the accusers.

This new investigation was to have taken place yesterday. But it was shown in The Evening World that none of the accusers had been cited to testify. This having been brought to the notice of the Commissioners of Charities by an Evening World reporter, President Porter at once telephoned to the Examining Board in session at Gouverneur Hospital at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to summon the witnesses without delay.

President Porter then informed the reporter that the Examining Board would call a special session for to-day and that it would have the witnesses present to testify.

At noon today none of these witnesses had yet been cited.

The Freedmans said that nobody had requested them to appear before the Examining Board, nor had any other notice of the kind been received by them.

Mr. Friedman, the mother of the accusers, who was taken home from Gouverneur Hospital last Wednesday, said to an Evening World reporter this morning:

"I suffered so badly at the hospital that my children thought it best to bring me home. The people at the hospital often let me lie for many hours without attention."

"I am too poor to engage a doctor now. We have, indeed, $100, but they are for living expenses, and I am afraid to spend any of it for a doctor, as it might leave us without food."

The woman is still in a precarious condition and presents a pitifully haggard appearance.

Dr. Lawrence Johnson, of 261 West Twenty-eighth street, who is secretary of the Examining Board, was seen by an Evening World reporter this morning in reference to the investigation of Dr. Donovan.

"I have nothing to say, except that our report has been submitted to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction," he said.

"Will you have a meeting to-day to investigate the doctor?"

"I cannot say."

"Have you notified the witnesses to attend?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Will you have a meeting to-day to investigate the doctor?"

"I cannot say."

"Have you notified the witnesses to attend?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Will you have a meeting to-day to investigate the doctor?"

"I cannot say."

"Have you notified the witnesses to attend?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."

"Then you intend to review those acts?"

"I cannot say."

"Is not Dr. Donovan out of your jurisdiction now that his term as house physician has expired?"

"His person may be," replied Dr. Johnson; "but his acts while house physician have certainly not passed beyond the pale of our jurisdiction."